Wings's Farina Crackers.

Mr. WING'S well-known establishment is occupied altegether a the manufacture of these superior Crackers.

It is estimated that they contain in the same weight twice as such nutriment as bread.

much nutriment as bread.

They are baked dry, are very light, and of small size—each barrel containing about Nine Thousand Crackers.

They are, however, principally distinguished from all others by the sweet taste of the Wheat or Grain, which is realizable as soon as they are fairly dissolved in the mouth; this takes place readily, and they are eaten with a fine rest.

They are not only pleasant to the taste, but agreeable for the stomach, and so easy of digestion as to become acceptable to the most delices.

They are not only pleasant to the taste, but agreeable for the most delicate.

They are reprecially desirable for children, also for persons of adelicate.
